In Thai culture, condiments are crucial to enhance the flavour profile of dishes. These condiments are similar to salt and pepper in western culture.

Thai people add condiments to personalise the flavour to their own taste. The secret of Thai cookings is to balance the key elements which are sweetness, saltiness, sourness and spiciness.

This concept also applies to Thai dipping sauces, which are traditionally pounded in a mortar and pestle. The texture and consistency of Thai dipping sauces are more watery and thin compared to Thai pastes.
